

Deploy

At the deployment stage, the new and completed software which we have developed is introduced to your business. Any final requirements for amendments are identified at this stage and we work with you to make a smooth transition from your current systems to the new one.

The first stage of the transition is software piloting: a pilot is run parallel to your current business processes. This ensures that the new software delivers full benefit and allows you to compare between the two states. Once piloting is complete, the former processes are closed, your new software is fully functioning and you are now able to enjoy the benefits.
